Be Serious But Have Fun

You can work hard at things you love, and keep on doing what you're supposed to do.

It may seem like I'm telling you two opposite things here, but I'm not. I'm saying that it's great to be dedicated, great to be hard working, but never lose sight that having fun and laughing are much more important than winning every single time.

Sure, winning is great, getting an A is great, scoring 100 is great, but the process of getting there can be great too. And you won't always get that A, so enjoy whatever it is you are learning, whether it's swinging a bat or a new math problem or a new story for your English class.
